LOYAL GUARDSMEN.

Their Second Annual Banquet a Great Success

The members of Subordinate Division No. 6. Knights of the Loyal Guard, their ladies and a few friends, enjoyed a most excellently served banquet and a fine literary feast at the Congregational church, last Friday evening. A reception from 7:30 to 8:30, was held in the church parlors, and then the banqueters marched to the dining rooms below, where the ladies of the church satisfied the appetite.

A. W. Meyers, Captain General of the Division, called to order, and in a few well chosen words, presented D. C. Hoyt as toastmaster. Don is one of the very popular and interested members, and presided in a pleasing manner. Mrs. Hoyt played Taunhauser's March in opening the program, and the rendition was appreciated.

I. M. Woodin responded to the toast, "Woodin's Babies." The response was in a humorous strain, though closed with a plea for babies in general, in the way of providing for them in case of death, accident or sickness. His were like othersthey eat, sleep, kick holes in their shoescoming by these kicking inclinations naturally, their mother says, but not on their mother's side. Through the Loyal Guard, or similar orders, he was able to feel that in case he died without other property, his insurance would be a welcome protection. has reduced the price of single tickets to 15 The efforts which one made were fully repaid by the children's very presencegreeting you and climbing on your lap after a hard day's work.

J. H. Webster interjected a five minute laugh by his "Dutch Serenade," and from from his younger experiences.

"Who Discovered Life Insurance, and why did he do it," by John L. Ash. The old judge had said a good lawyer was not one who had read and pondered over all books and knowledge, but one who could put his hand on the thing he wanted at the time it was wanted. And while he knew many things about insurance he did not want to swear he could tell who started it. Adam did not, for three reasons: First, his family history was unknown, making him hardly eligible; the mortuary tables were not complete so a rate could be made, and there was no one to initiate him into an insurance order. The speaker had concluded that insurance was simply making preparations for a rainy day, and as Noah had been the first man that did this, he had concluded Noah was the inventor, and had protected himself and his family by so doing.

Miss Gertrude Faxon sang sweetly, "I Cannot Help Loving Thee," and responded to an encore.

Otto L. Sprague took up "The Business Man and Fraternal Insurance," showing the inconsistency of buying goods as cheaply as one could, getting every little discount and then turning a cold shoulder on the insurance order, that protected the family and made more money for them than his business could, and in case of sudden death, if business should be somewhat incumbered a thousand or two of insurance might save a sacrifice of property of far greater value, and the cost be less than the price of a cigar a day, and for that amount both wife and husband could be insured and many a worry saved during life.

Deputy Supreme Commander Torrey, of Flint, made a stirring fraternal address. and a strong plea for brotherhood and unity as exemplified in the teachings of this and similar orders.

Miss Rogers recited "God is Nowhere, in a dramatic manner, and C. W. Danforth sang "The Them," and an encore in a clear and pleasing voice.

J. H. Webster toasted "The Ladies," remarking: "Man that is born of woman is small potatoes and few in a hill-and be resembles his mother. The German philosopher said, "there was youst so much difference in people as anybody-and the same difference exchists between the ladies." But why I was selected to reply to this delicate subject is a mystery to me, unless it is the extreme bashfulness of the balance of the fraternity or the fact that I have been eighteen years on the road, and traveling men are supposed to be thoroughly posted in regard to the ladies. However that may be, I wish to say right here, that it has been ever thus since childhood, when there has been a hard or delicate task to be performed I have been selected. When my father had an ax to grind I was invited to turn the crank, and he generally bore down pretty hard too. When I became a member of this order I was selected as one of two victims out of 18 or 20 to do the heavy work, and I have a notion to tell you all about it, but I respect my promise and will be revenged] in some other way; and now comes the bale of straw that breaks the camel's back. A toast to the ladies: I suppose I am expected to say something funny, so will tell the truth-I have been married 18 years and have never been divorced once, though I think I was swindled when I paid the parson that ten dollars. I have a wife, three daughters, a sister-in-law and a mother-in-law, so I think I am competent to give some of you old bachelors advice; if you have never been married you have certainly missed half your life and probably the other half is glad of it. But to be serious, a good wife is a priceless boon as some of you men can testify who have placed no value on them at all; why you should tell your wife you love her three times a day, say after each meal, but you need not shake her as you would Paine's celery. Did I say after each meal, no, better before meals as she may do her own cooking, in that case you may be in a better state of mind before meals. And to the unmarried men 1 would say you are missing the very yeast and spice, yea the very pepper of life; get married; if you can't find a wife get a mother-in-law anyhow. You have heard the expression, over head and ears in love. When a man becomes that deeply submerged he has actually lost five senses, viz : Sight, hearing, speech, smelling and taste, but they usually recover. You have all seen the beautiful picture of the three graces, if I had my way I would have that picture changed somewhat, instead of three maidens I would have an old maid to represent "Hope," a married lady for "Faith." and her mother for "Charity." And now on behalf of the Knights of the Loyal Guards I will say to the ladies, welcome. We love and revere you and pledge by the honor of our noble order to be your Loyal Guards."

Fred Chapell sang two of his favorite songs in his usual funny and approved

Dr. J. D. Crum closed the program with toast to "Brotherly Love," his references to the exemplification of brotherly love in the societies and in the thoughtfulness of these unions that end with death, making happy many a dear one, were appreciated by the guests.

The meeting was in every respect a suc cess, reflecting credit upon the officers, and showing the healthy condition of the order. The membership is an active, interested and intelligent body and the order may well be proud of its division here. The committees who performed their duties most acceptably were: Entertainment-A. W. Meyers, Geo. M. Owen, Louis G. Heyer, Don C. Hoyt, Wm. Curliss; reception-O. L. Sprague, L. G. Heyer, Dr. J. D. Crum, A. W. Meyers, L. M. Woodin, I O. Chase.
